

Xavier University

Exhibit

COVID-19 & Xavier: Documents

COVID-19 & Xavier: A Digital Collection

2020-05-10

Quarantine Reflection

Anonymous

Follow this and additional works at: https://www.exhibit.xavier.edu/covid19xu_documents

Preferred Citation

"Quarantine Reflection" (2020). COVID-19 & Xavier: Documents. https://www.exhibit.xavier.edu/covid19xu_documents/

This Text is brought to you for free and open access by the COVID-19 & Xavier: A Digital Collection at Exhibit. It has been accepted for inclusion in COVID-19 & Xavier: Documents by an authorized administrator of Exhibit. For more information, please contact exhibit@xavier.edu.

Overall this quarantine isolation is allowing me to examine many aspects of not only my life but our society as a whole. First and foremost, I truly believe that we will never get back to the level of normalcy that we once had. I think that small gatherings and the distance between each other will become more commonplace. Not to mention the metaphorical distance some people are putting between them and the government who they see as having betrayed them in their handling of this global pandemic. That being said, I feel like my skills with time management, organization, as well as creativity, have grown immensely over the span of time. Even at university, where my abilities to manage my time were tested, I feel as though being at home made it even harder to work productively with so many distractions. I'm glad to say that I overcome these difficulties. All in all, I feel like this is a new step for humanity, and the changes that we felt during and after this quarantine will be in effect for centuries to come.