Leader Discusses Ireland's Revival

Dr. Thomas Roseingrave from Dublin, regarded as a major figure in Ireland's light and grace, was the guest of Our Lady of Cincinnati College Tuesday. He will address an assembly at 3 p.m. on "The Rule of Ireland in a World of Strife."

A member of the Irish Management Institute and the Irish History Society, Dr. Roseingrave also is lecturer for the Dublin Adult Educational Committee and lectures in industrial relations for the Dublin Institute of Catholic Sociology. He is president of the Catholic Society's Vocational Organization Conference.

For the past ten years Dr. Roseingrave has been active in the economic revival of Ireland. To further his ideas he has participated in 200 broadcasts on economic, social and cultural subjects, and has written for Irish and British reviews and journals on economic, social and historical questions.

He was admitted to Christian Brothers' College in Limerick, and the University College in Dublin. He also studied music at the Royal Irish Academy and at present is a member of the Royal Irish Radio Choir.

'Campus Tensions' is NCEA Theme

"Tensions on the Catholic college campus" is the theme of the Midwest Unit of National Catholic Education Association, Nov. 3 at Cosgrove University.

Attending the meeting will be Dr. Daniel J. Stillke, head of the division of humanities, and Dr. Siegmund A. E. Bets, professor of English and the classics.

Gibson Co. Executive Heads Fund Group

William C. Dressman, vice-president of Gibson Greeting Cards Company, is chairman of the newly organized "Fathers Fund for Edgecliff" committee. Funds will provide salary increases for faculty members.

Committee members include Lloyd J. Byrne, vice-president of Western and Southern Airlines, and Edgar S. Edelmann of Schenley Laboratories.

The second organizational meeting of the committee will be held Oct. 22 in Easley Hall.

Prefaces Fly to Ecumenical Council; Students Attend Pontifical Mass

Regarded by church leaders as one of the most significant events of the century, one which will affect the life of the Church worldwide, the upcoming Ecumenical Council will continue its first session until December.

More than 2600 cardinals, bishops and leaders of religious orders have gathered in Rome to accelerate modernization, and renewal within the Church.

Among the most vital topics to come up for discussion during the second Vatican Council are:

- Episcopal Infallibility. The Pope when speaking ex cathedra is infallible. But just how do bishops, as descendants of the Apostles, share in this infallibility? The Council may give form to the traditional idea that when bishops speak together and unanimously on a matter of faith and morals, they, too, are infallible.
- Liturgy. The Council may make revisions or changes in some aspects of the liturgy, such as making vernacular translations of some parts of the Mass.
- Married Deaconate. Deacons may be allowed to marry and to hold full-time jobs. They would work mainly in areas where there is a shortage of priests. Among their duties would be to distribute Holy Communion, baptize, teach catechism and conduct certain services.
- Lids of the Laity. The Council will stand for the "unity of Catholic" and ways to bring them back into the active fold of the Church.
- Church Relations. The attitude of the Church toward Protestant missionary work in largely Catholic countries, such as the Latin American countries, and the position of the Church in lands where another religion is the "state religion" will be brought up for discussion.
- After Easter the Council will return for a second session to last about two months. If a third session is necessary, it will be called in the fall of 1963.

One of the things the Council hopes to accomplish is to make the Church more familiar and attractive to the 400 million Eastern Orthodox and Protestant Christians whom it calls its "separated brethren." These Churches have been invited to send delegates to the Council.

The very Rev. Paul J. O'Connor, S.J., president of Xavier University, will represent the University at the Council.

Following his naval duty, he was dean of men at the University of Notre Dame, and dean of studies at Xavier University. He recently was elected president of the American Council on Education.

After the breakfast the girls conducted their fathers on a tour of Grace Hall of Science and other buildings on the campus.

The fathers learned about latest developments plans of the college. They were shown the sites and proposed plans for the new dormitory and the theater-free arts building.

The Edgecliff Story Shown At Annual Breakfast

The Edgecliff Story, sponsored by the Fathers Club, was previewed Sunday after the annual Father-daughter breakfast, at which Mr. Anthony J. Bruneman, Fathers Club president, presided. Mr. Patrick Maloney, director of public relations, showed the color slide pictorial in Grace Hall.

"The students," he said, "will be able to see from this story how the college is promoting its interests." He explained that the slides will be shown in high school junior and seniors within a 250-mile radius in order to acquaint them with what Edgecliff has to offer.

Edelmann students and their fathers attended 9 a.m. Mass in the college chapel. They participated in a dialogue Mass at which the Rev. Alfred G. Stritch was the celebrant.

Breakfast followed in the cafeteria.

Sister Mary Virginia, president of the college, welcomed the group.

Father Eugene H. Maly of Mount St. Bernard College was the official correspondent for the local Catholic press.

The Very Rev. Paul J. O'Connor, S.J., president of Xavier University, was the featured speaker at the breakfast. Father O'Connor was a chaplain in the United States Navy from 1944-1949.

"Renew Your wonders by a New Perspective" was the dominant theme of the speech. The quotation is part of a prayer for the success of the Second Vatican Council — the Council of Renewal.

Constitution Threatened

At rare instances in history men sometimes seem to be divinely inspired. Certainly, the four evangelists are outstanding examples and the Constitution of the Holy Spirit.

In 1776, on this very continent, a group of men gathered to prepare certain documents to govern the people of what was to be the United States. These men, who deliberated on these matters, such as Alexander Hamilton, believed that only the intelligensia of the country should have a voice in this government. Others believed that only land owners or "vested gentry" should have a voice.

None expressed the opinion that any but free men should decide the fate of the nation. No one contemplated that either slaves or those debtors in bondage should ever have the right to vote. Yet, these very men all signed a document prepared by Thomas Jefferson which stated that "all men are created with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Certainly, the concept of equality among mankind, including equal rights for the intelligentsia, the land-holders and the slaves as well as the ratio of intellectual capabilities of the signers of our historical documents.

Truly, the Holy Spirit must have guided the pen of Thomas Jefferson to write these words which are mind-bending to those precepts which today guarantee not only the freedom of James Meredith, but also those written by him by education at the University of Mississippi. All the hereditary liars of more than 100 years are being suppressed by the presence of United States troops stationed at University. Many men today are very angry who are enforcing this equality are native Mississippians serving in the federalized Mississippi National Guard.

It is our prayerful hope that the Holy Spirit, who inspired slave owners to write and sign the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States of America, will today inspire the descendants of the framers and the heirs to these documents with sufficient Christian stamina to enforce our precepts which reflect the words of Jesus, "Love one another as I have loved you." Love opens the doors of our universities and the portals of our hearts to all men of good will.

Conscience of a Conservative

Senator Barry Goldwater's book, The Conscience of a Conservative, might be more aptly titled "The Conscience of an Inactionary." For what he advocates is inaction. In his foreword Senator Goldwater states that "the Conservative approach is nothing more than a recognition of the limits of man's ability to apply the wisdom and expertise and the revealed truths of the past to the problems of today."

It is doubtful that anyone would disagree with this proper approach. The problem is the matter of interpretation, and according to the Senator's interpretation, the correct path to follow is one of inaction. He would apply 19th century solutions to 20th century problems.

We, as a nation, must ignore our enemies because we do not agree with them, according to Senator Goldwater. He would deny the rights and safety of minorities in order to avoid tyranny of the majority, whereas tyranny of the majority would be just as wicked. However, ignoring an enemy problem does not make it go away.

The chief defect of the book is the tendency toward irresponsible and destructive criticism. It may be true that "the root difference between the Conservatives and the Liberals of today is that Conservatives believe that the world should be let alone while the Liberals tend to look only at the material side of man's nature" as the Senator claims. Typically, however, he does not say why he believes this is a conclusion but gives no evidence to support his statement.

The only redeeming factor is that The Conscience of a Conservative is obvious a sincere book and obviously a proper approach. The problem is the matter of interpretation, and according to the Senator's interpretation, the correct path to follow is one of inaction. He would apply 19th century solutions to 20th century problems.

We, as a nation, must ignore our enemies because we do not agree with them, according to Senator Goldwater. He would deny the rights and safety of minorities in order to avoid tyranny of the majority, whereas tyranny of the majority would be just as wicked. However, ignoring an enemy problem does not make it go away.

The Arts

Arts Offer Entertainment Harvest by Carol Meilinger

The two most beautiful and fulfilling seasons of the year are spring and fall. In the springtime the world of nature becomes alive; in the autumn the world of the arts comes into its harvest.

During autumn nature is preparing, so to speak, for its annual hibernation. And simultaneously the world of the arts is bursting forth in its fullness to provide many different forms of entertainment during the long winter that time that nature is not in full bloom.

Mr. David Beeler, director of the Edgcliff Academy of Fine Arts, has an exciting season of drama planned for the Academy. First on the schedule will be Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Nov. 17. The first performance will be an invitational preview for the Edgcliff Academy foundation members.

Wilde's Comedy

The second play, to be performed in the Baxter Nov. 26 to Dec. 6, will be "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Oscar Wilde. Other productions for the 1962-1963 season include: Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie," Jan. 2-12; Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," Jan. 25-Feb. 2; William Inge's "The Immortals." Feb. 13-23. This last is based on the story of a contemporary, Richard Nash, who was with the Academy for the 1961-62 season, as technical director.

Resident Company

Other productions, which are not of the Resident Company in addition to Mr. Barrie and Rudolph Carigoi, speech and drama instructor, include Margaret O'Shea who was with the Academy last year, and Mrs. Margaret Maroney, Joseph Palmeri, Jay Ehrlich, Daniel Grace and Scott Thomas.

New costume designer in the Academy productions is Barbara Krenkel who holds a Master of Fine Arts degree in Drama from Catholic University. Jay Depenbrook will serve as technical director.

In the world of music the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music will be featured in the "O Chock Burie," a season of monthly concerts. On Nov. 5 at Musical Hall the orchestra will take the audience on a journey to "The Shadow of Death." Jeannée Kirstein, pianist, will be the soloist with the Symphony on its regular concert Oct. 26 and 27.

French Artist

A French cultural function at the Art Museum is "Sculpture and Drawing of Antoine Bourdelle," a noted French artist. This exhibition will continue through Nov. 6.

"Drawings—U. S. A.," Nov. 10- Dec. 1, is an exhibition organized by the St. Paul Gallery and School of Art, and circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

Opinions Gathered

How Do You Like Grace Hall?

"Grace Hall of Sciences is an art in itself," said E. Paul Wilhlem, a Cincinnati professional contempory painter who specializes in abstract. "The most effective and practical manner in which a student can learn about art is by perceiving beautiful surroundings through the senses. New Grace Hall is an excellent example of what is possible when art is taught art through perception," continued Mr. Wilhlem. Mr. Wilhlem is a member of the Board of Directors of the Liturgical Arts Group of the Archdiocese of Cincinnati.

Last year during the productions of Oedipus Rex, Mr. Wilhlem's paintings were on display in the lobby of Grace Hall. He also designed the stained-glass window at McAdory High School.

Juliana Gallig '63 Chemistry is a real pleasure in the new Grace Hall. The individual laboratory facilities reduce time formerly wasted in the use of several classrooms, and also allow students to set their own work pace. An individual laboratory is equipped with its own city water and distilled water taps, an air valve for quick drying of glassware and a vacuum pump and steam bath which are operated by simple turn-valves.

The bust and coats associated with the chemical lab are gone forever thanks to the hoods, air conditioning and positive ventilation systems. The innovation of durable plastic equipment, safety goggles and a vacuum pump and steam bath as a result of recent elections.

The Bela Is came to America in 1939 and in 1941 took up their residence in Hamilton. Dr. Austen Belai was awarded many military decorations including the Knightly Cross of the Emperor Karl. Freshmen Receive Symbolic Caps

"This evening you receive your colors. The colors are blue and white,—the colors of Our Lady," said Bonnie Wade, Student Council president, to the 1963 freshmen. Bonnie told the freshmen that the colors are symbolic, a symbol of devotion to the Blessed Virgin, and second, so that faculty and other students would be able to recognize them as freshmen.

Cleo Arling explained the significance of the colors, saying that the blue is a symbol of love, loyalty and beauty; the white represents truth. She stated that the freshmen caps were placed before the Blessed Mother's statue the night before "in the same spirit that the knights of the Middle Ages placed their hel­ mets and swords on the altar before going into battle.

As Carol Congrove read the names of the freshmen Bonnie Wade placed the caps on their heads. Martha Schuetz, president of the Music Club, accompanied the seniors as they sang the100th. With the captioning ceremony the freshmen become part of Edgcliff's tradition. Socially said, Donna Houtker, president of the French Club applauded the faculty and other students for their efforts to welcome the freshmen.

Law for Historian Stresses Values of Communist Course

"Communism will not be destroyed with a few words," predicts Mr. Irwin Rhodes, instructor in the sociology department at Edgcliff.

"It is necessary to explain it in our schools. We must understand the world movements opposed in theory and practice to our way of life."

Edgcliff's Communism class, taught by Mr. Rhodes, was inaugurated in 1962. Mr. Rhodges, a graduate in history of the Party, lives of its leaders, and the forces it has created.

"Our course touches on many other phases," said Mr. Rhodhes. "It includes economics, history, philosophy and education."

Mr. Rhodhes is a member of the American Bar Association's standing Committee on Education Against Communism.

He graduated from Harvard Law School in 1954. That same year he joined the Harvard School of Business Administration and earned a Master of Arts degree from Harvard University in 1961.

A practicing lawyer, he found time to lecture at the University of Cincinnati, the University of Pittsburgh, and the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Rhodhes is the author of numerous articles about John Marshall, chief justice of the Supreme Court during the early nineteen century, which have appeared in the following historical and philosophical publications of Ohio.

He is currently writing a book on James Madison. Besides his book, Mr. Rhodes is working on the latest equipment such as walk-in refrigerators and incubators. The scrapbook of Grace Hall is the answer to any student's dreams. Labs have been moved, time formerly wasted in the use of several classrooms, and also allow students to set their own work pace. An individual laboratory is equipped with its own city water and distilled water taps, an air valve for quick drying of glassware and a vacuum pump and steam bath which are operated by simple turn-valves.

Alumni Plan Drive

For Fund Solicitation

Edgcliff Sunday Nov. 4, will be "an important date" for all members of the Edgcliff Alumnus Association, according to Judy Thompson Gething, newly installed president.

All the soliciting for the Edgcliff Fund Drive will be in this one afternoon.

Beneficent at 1 p.m. in the college chapel will open the campaign. Audrey Donahue is chairman of the Fund Drive and Helen Trench Peter is co-chairman.

During the 1961-62 Edgcliff Alumni Fund Drive, a total of $14,054 was raised.

The new goal of the Edgcliff Choral Chanting of alumnus pledging $100 or more to the drive, is to match the $14,054 which will belong to Jane Haag and Adele Pohlt Corbal, co-chairmen for 1962-63.
Funds Influence Academic Life

"Government money does have an influence on universities," stated Dr. Mary Imm, president of the National Catholic Social Action at the forty-fifth annual meeting of the American Council on Education, in Columbus.

"Although government money does not change a university's policies," Dr. Beitz explained, "delegations expressed a fear that it may pull people away from the public servant's desk to the corridors of power. But they also saw a dual purpose: (1) to present comprehensive, authoritative and up-to-the-minute program in higher education; (2) to present comprehensive, authoritative and up-to-the-minute program in higher education as a consumer of ideas; (3) to incorporate all aspects of higher education. Moreover, it was agreed that this money should preside over the educational programs and governments offices.

Representing Edgcliff in addition to Dr. Beitz were: Anna Mary Bix, junior delegate; Mary Carol Lang, senior delegate.

"A grill supper, music and moonlight will provide the atmosphere for Edgcliff's first N.P. social of the school year on Sunday, Oct. 20, according to the co-chairman of the event.

Cecilia Russell '65 and Sylvia Steer '65 are co-chairmen of the "Harvest Time" tea which is being sponsored by Edgcliff's chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. The students have announced that proceeds from the $5-a-plate admission will go to the College and University Relief Administration. Through CURA, the money will aid students in South America. Monics Ruppert, a '65 Edgcliff alumna, is there with Paul Volunteers.

Committee Heads

Prompting that the dance, an open affair, will be "delightfully different," the co-chairmen announced the following committee heads: Barbene Kuether and Mary Carol Lang, tickets; Susan Schugott, refreshments; Marie Owen and Susan Steck, decorations.

Another dance and a football trip to Notre Dame are on N.P.'s money raising schedule. Outlines Aims

At the initial campus meeting of N.P. Oct. 17, both students and faculty were oriented to the aims and structure of the National Federation. Carol Trauth, senior delegate, gave a brief explanation of N.P.'s structure.

Ellen Trenn, Contemporary Issues chairman, said that discussions will be held every other Wednesday, focusing assembly. Major areas of concentration will be "Urban Renewal" and its related problems of education, segregation in housing, race relations.

The National Contemporary Issues Seminar, "The Social Encyclopaedia: Christianity and Student Action," will provide the source material for these discussions. Ellen said.

Contemporary Seminar

Carol added that those participating will be asked to lead discussions of the coming Contemporary Issues Seminar in February, sponsored by the Ohio Valley Region of N.P. at Edgcliff.

Cecilia Russell, junior delegate, announced that the committee has decided to meet at 4 p.m. at the golf inn near Emery. Dave Zepfel, returning chairman, will ask all interested students to sign a "attendance" entreaty between supper and the dance. Dancing will be held on the large patio of Emery's campus, with music by the five-piece combo "Midnight Sun." Another dance and a football trip to Notre Dame are on N.P.'s money raising schedule.

Revival of the traditional "supper club" marked the Oct. 17 NF meeting in Emery. Officers prepared and served the upper to members. Shown above are Cecilia Russell (in background), N.P.'s junior delegate; Carol Trauth, senior delegate.

College Articulates With High Schools

The college's Intramural Study Committee continued its deliberations on high school杅all college relations at a recent meeting.

The committee is studying closer articulation with local high schools. At the present time, the college is the only high school meeting held on the campus. It hopes that such a council of teachers will improve the understanding between both educational levels.

One group of high school students for the college and the expectations of the college regarding qualifications of entering freshmen will be studied.

Jean Wingerter Lueke celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of her graduation from this college on the same day that she welcomed her daughter, Lynn, (center), into the Alumnae Association. At the same time, she encouraged both her son, Barry (left) and John (right) who are freshmen this year.

"We're definitely not played as favorites at this time," said Joe, "but don't disregard the other students." Dr. Beitz agreed, "In terms of practice and competition, we may pull people away from the other players."
