National politicians will speak on campus

Edgewood's Political Science Association is bringing two speakers to the campus this week. Both speakers have been involved with the Nixon administration but differ in their attitudes toward the country's political direction.

Ernest Fitzgerald will speak at Edgewood on Thursday, November 2, from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the lecture hall in Grace Hall. Mr. Fitzgerald is a former White House aide, accountant for the Pentagon. After discussing to Congress that the $840 million deficit in the five-billion-dollar overrun on the CBA, he found himself fired for his embarrassment to the Department.

Mr. Fitzgerald has since been employed on the staff of Senator William Proxmire. He will talk about the pressure from Wisconsin. His talk will cover defense contract procedures and cost overruns.

Dolf Drog will speak on Friday, November 3, at 1 p.m. in the Edgecliff Theatre. Mr. Drog is serving as a general representative of the White House to the American people. Mr. Drog has designed a number of programs for the White House, including the "Let's Talk About It" series.

For the reason, buses will run from the union to the tentative schedule below. The schedule will be altered to conform more closely to the times if registration warrants it.

The dean pointed out that one can attend the cooperation is that a student could take a major in English at the university and still be able to attend more closely to the times that are offered at his own college.

"We realize that if we are serious about the cooperation we would have to provide transportation, the lack of which might be a hindrance to inter-institutional education.

"I'm a Fulbright scholar from India," Prayerna Bali is a biologist at St. Ursula's College. "The Master never sleeps," T. S. Eliot, the English poet and essayist, said in an area newspaper.

Mr. Ronald Watkins is a Fulbright scholar from India. Mr. Watkins will expound upon the subject of Shakespeare's "Hamlet" in the Alumnae Lounge, October 29.

In explaining this increased availability of courses, Dr. William Wester, Academic Dean at Edgewood, pointed out that it would be necessary to provide transportation for students who wish to attend courses at other institutions.

"We realized that if we are serious about the cooperation we would have to provide transportation, the lack of which might be a hindrance to inter-institutional education.

Mr. Watkins has lectured at Stratford on Avon, in London and throughout the United Kingdom, to drama societies, conferences, schools and for the British Council in Italy and Malta. He has given more than 50 lectures at several major universities, colleges, and schools in the United States. For the Candelmas Term of 1970, he lectured and taught classes in the English department of the University of St. Andrews, Fife. He is also on the Advisory Board of the St. George's Elizabethan Theatre at Bath, the United Kingdom.

Mr. Watkins was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, England. He also attended the University of Basel.

Mr. Watkins second visit to Edgewood's campus. He was the author of 1959, participating in the Salzburg semiannual conference by the English department. He will also be at Mt. St. Joseph College on November 29, speaking on the topic of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" and the conditions under which it was written.

Among Mr. Watkins' outstanding contributions to the production of Shakespeare-studies drama is his attempt to re-create the plays as they had been performed on the Elizabethan stage during Shakespeare's time. He initiated the Harlow Shakespearean Production at Harrow School, which put this idea into actual practice.

Mr. Watkins has also been noted as another book on Shakespearean production. In his book, "Shakespeare in the Globe," he describes his performances of a Midsummer Night's Dream. He has contributed a full account of the production methods he had developed in his book, "Producing Shakespeare."
Candidates Views Contrast
As November 7 draws near

by Nick Schenkel

"This year you have one of the clearest choices in the history of Presidential elections: Ronald Nixon or Richard M. Nixon? Both Nixon and McGovern claim credit for proclaiming it for the first time that an election really doesn't matter. What does matter is what both candidates and the voters apply they would do if elected and what evidence there is for believing them.

Nixon

One of the outstanding questions this election is the Vietnam War. But even before we determine what the votes may be four years ago by nearly everyone, feelings about Vietnam are as important as the war is. Nixon supporters believe they have the issue on their side by pointing out Nixon's inheritance of the war, his bringing home of nine-tenths of the troops, reducing casualties by nine-fifteen percent, and getting around the globe on "Peace Mission." But several points have been overlooked. Nixon lost the 1968 campaign to take the White House and it is more than a year since the war has been fought. But this race is more than a war and putting the Nixon Administration as the ground war is almost over.

McGovern's stand. He claims he has been the opponent of the war from the beginning. "Peace now," he said in 1963. But Ways Morse of Creve Cito, a military man, a naval special agent, has been against the war and our involvement in it since the Truman Administration. It seems to me McGovern was one of the two or three or four who stood up and voted against. McGovern was not the other. And what of McGovern's proposed policy of a ninety-day withdrawal — is it feasible? Logically the answer seems to be yes.

He can point to high military personnel as proof, but whether he will get his prisoners released in Saigon is debatable. The plan, however, would terminate our involvement in the following war.

Domestic Front

On the Domestic Front, McGov­ren claims the lead. His entire political career has been one of calling and fighting for rights for all citizens, an end to poverty and hunger and provisions for medical relief. He points with pride to his support of the Black Course Pro­gram, of supporting early civil rights legislation, and of opposing the McNamara proposal in their bids for the Supreme Court. Mc­Govern leads by a large margin of not $1000 give-aways, but of federally funded job training. He is the only one of those who cannot work because of blind­ness, both of his eyes. He worked as the head of the Food for Peace Pro­gram from 1953 to 1968. He has insisted, taught him much about hunger in America.

Today

On ecology, McGovern has given many opinions but strangely little legislative action. He votes for en­vironmental bills but does little more. The President can point with pride in his accomplishments, but whether he will get his prisoners released in Saigon is debatable. The plan, however, would terminate our involvement in the following war.

The vote is yours — and re­cycles itself under presidential aspirants — VOTE!

Results of mock election held October 4:
90 McGovern
9 McGovern
1 Bill Keating

Philip Roth satirizes Politico in Our Gang'

by Stephen Collyer

In Where I Find Myself, Roth is at ease as he talks about his increasing involvement with the Jewish community. He explains how he got involved with the Jewish community and how he became a part of it. The book is well-written and gives a great insight into his life and thoughts. Roth's writing is very engaging and he keeps the reader interested throughout the book. The book is recommended for anyone who is interested in Jewish culture and Roth's life.

Motion picture updates the Story of 'A Separate Peace'

by Kathy Kohlman

A Separate Peace, widely-read novel by John Knowles, is now a motion picture produced by Paramount Pictures. The movie is currently running at the Ambassador Theatre. The film, set during World War II, stars John Hally as the athletic, Byrd, and played by Philip Roth as his best friend. The movie closely follows the novel in recounting the story of Finny and Gene's friendship, set against the background of a New England boarding school. A noticeable difference from the novel is the movie's portrayal of Byrd's physical education. The film is recommended for anyone interested in the story and Roth's writing.
Governor appoints dean To Psychology Board

Dr. Waster, Vice-President and Academic Dean of Edgcliff, was appointed by the Board of Education to the State Board of Psychology October 8. Mr. Waster was awarded as a result of a recent revision of the Ohio law. It consists of four members, two psychologists and one layman, with one member serving an odd year.

'Good News' at Xavier

The Xavier University Players have opened their season with the delightful 1927 musical "Good News" under the direction of Otto Krepel. The show played for three performances last past week and is scheduled for three more November 3, 4, 5, at 8 p.m. in the Xavier Center Theatre.

The Barber of Seville

The Barber of Seville, the French operetta company that presented "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" at the College of St. Joseph last season, will return this year on November 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. to present Le Barbier de Seville.

The plot of The Barber (with the words and music of Rossini) is probably better known by opera fans than the Beaumarchais play, and the operetta version of it is probably better known by opera fans than the Beaumarchais play.

The handsome Count-Almaviva, with the aid of the barber Figaro, plans to woo the lovely Rosina, ward of the father, and Sidney, who keeps her shut away and intends to marry her herself. In the end, all the plots and tricks of young love triumph.

Taxes for the November 2 production are priced at $2.50 for students and $3.00 for the general public. Additional information can be obtained by contacting the college at 244-4200.

Paintings and ceramics

The works of Edna Hibel are now on display in Emery Gallery at Edgcliff College. They will be there until November 4. Miss Hibel has been acclaimed as one of the most successful women painters in the United States today. Born in Boston, Mass., she worked with Alexander Jeanneveau and Karl Zerbe. She was the recipient of the Stroetchart Travelling Fellowship in 1939, which allowed her to study in Mexico. Edna Hibel's view of the world is an optimistic one. She believes that the true human individual is born when he perceives that he is both an integral part of the human society of loving-kindness of one for all makes human life possible and worthwhile. Man of today is a proud achievement who will yet fill his cup to the brim with a full measure of loving-kindness. In this connection, she writes: "The only thing that remains valid in our past is that it has served as sources of subject matter for her art."

Meet the Professor

Mr. Goller perceives Mathematics as art

Mr. Richard Goller is one of the new faces to be found on the faculty of Edgecliff. Mr. Goller holds a Master of Science degree and serves as an instructor of mathematics. He is currently teaching Calculus, Advanced Calculus, and Differential Equations.

NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Goller has a strong New England background. Born in Massachusetts, he attended a local high school. In 1966, he received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Mount St. Joseph College, also in Massachusetts.

During the years 1966 to 1971, Mr. Goller was a teaching assistant at the University of New Hampshire. In 1968, he received a Master of Science degree from the University of New Hampshire and currently is a candidate for a Doctor of Philosophy degree, also from the University of New Hampshire.

Edgcliff

Before coming to Edgcliff to teach in 1972, Mr. Goller had been teaching at Western State College in Pennsylvania for a year. His reasons for coming to Edgcliff are varied. He likes a small school and feels that the community of a small college really tends to care more about people. "Alas," he stated, "the students of a small college are usually conscientious toward their studies."

Mr. Goller believes there is a definite difference between the people of New England and the people here in Cincinnati. "The people of New England are more reserved," he said, "and they are more a demic atmosphere. All programs are held in the auditorium of the College of Mount St. Joseph.

The national president of the National Organization of Women, Wilma Scott Heids, will be the featured speaker in the February symposium on "Women in Society" as the next part of the series.

The first speaker in the series was Anthony Padovano, who spoke on "Reverence for Life." Father Padovano is the author of Man without darkness, Belief in Human Life, and Free to Be Faithful.

Students are admitted free to all lectures.

Students organize Basketball sessions

Edgcliff College is in the process of forming a male basketball team. This attempt, headed by Jim Leaven and Ed Hasselle, is an attempt to establish the establishment of regular practice sessions and intra-squad scrimmages.

The team practices Tuesday from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m., Wednesday from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Thursday from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. If conditions are favorable there will be practice on Fridays also.

Gail Simpson is the coach of the team. Mr. Simpson has worked worked with teams of the Amateur Athletic Union and is an avid fan.

So far the players have demonstrated considerable enthusiasm. The team has expressed a wish to include additional players. Any interested male who is a full-time Edgecliff student contact either Mr. Gail Simpson, Jim Leaven, Jim Jackson or Bill Harvey for further information.

At the polls

Workers count while you vote

On election night, November 7, there will be 40 to 50 Edgcliff students working to tabulate the results at central election headquarters in Cincinnati.

They will be stationed downtown in Convention Center where some will act as telephone clerks, messengers, and call-board operators.

First, the information is telephoned into the center from local polls. It is then tabulated and fed into the prime computer and a backup center (in case anything happens to the prime computer). The results then go to different branches: regional (or local), teletype services, and New York where it is broadcast across the nation.

The Edgcliff extends sympathy to Marianne and Pat Brunner on the death of their brother.
